

8.02 Admissibility Limited by Confrontation Clause (Crawford)¹

(1) Confrontation rule in a criminal prosecution. A “testimonial statement” of a person who does not testify at trial is not admissible against a defendant for the truth of the statement, unless the witness is unavailable to testify and the defendant had a prior opportunity for cross-examination, or the defendant engaged or acquiesced in wrongdoing that was intended to and did procure the unavailability of the witness.

(2) Testimonial statement, in general.

A hearsay statement is testimonial when it consists of:

(a) prior testimony at a preliminary hearing, before a grand jury, or at a former trial;

(b) an out-of-court statement in which

(i) state actors are involved in a formal, out-of-court interrogation of a witness to obtain evidence for trial; or

(ii) absent a formal interrogation, the circumstances demonstrate that the “primary purpose” of an exchange was to procure an out-of-court statement to prove criminal conduct or past events potentially relevant to a later criminal prosecution, or otherwise substitute for trial testimony.

(3) Statement to police.

A statement made to the police is not testimonial when made in the course of a police interrogation under circumstances objectively indicating that the primary purpose of the interrogation is to enable police assistance to meet an ongoing emergency. The statement to the police is testimonial when the circumstances objectively indicate that there is no ongoing emergency and that the primary purpose of the interrogation is to establish or prove past events potentially relevant to a later criminal prosecution. A statement obtained by the police in a formal station house interrogation for that stated purpose is thus testimonial.

(4) Statement to a court.

A defendant's guilty plea allocution that implicates a codefendant is a testimonial statement and may not therefore be admitted at the trial of the codefendant in the absence of an opportunity for the codefendant to cross-examine the defendant.

(5) Statement made for the safety or treatment of a person.

(a) A statement of a student made in response to an inquiry of an educator is not testimonial when the primary purpose of the inquiry was to provide for the safety of the child.

(b) A statement of a patient made in response to an inquiry by a physician is not testimonial when the primary purpose of the inquiry was to diagnose the patient's condition and administer medical treatment.

(6) Forensic Report.

(a) A statement in a forensic report is testimonial if it identifies an item connected to the defendant as an illegal drug, or delineates the blood-alcohol content of a defendant's blood, or identifies the defendant through a fingerprint analysis or through a DNA analysis of incriminating evidence.

(b) A testimonial forensic report entitles a defendant to be confronted, as defined in subdivision one, with either the person who performed the analysis underlying the forensic report or with a person who is a trained analyst who supervised, witnessed, or observed the analysis or who conducted an independent analysis of the primary data.

(c) Autopsy Report.

(i) Autopsy reports are testimonial evidence and the admission of autopsy reports through an expert witness who did not perform the autopsies, as well as that witness's testimony, violates a defendant's right to confrontation where the defendant had not been given a prior opportunity to cross-examine the performing medical examiner.

(ii) An expert medical examiner may, however, offer conclusions as to the cause and manner of death, and surrounding circumstances, where that testifying expert performed, supervised, or observed the autopsy or used their independent analysis on the primary data. Autopsy photographs and video recordings of a conducted autopsy may properly be relied upon by a testifying witness reaching their own independent conclusions, as well as standard anatomical measurements devoid of the subjective skill and judgment of the performing examiner.

(d) Nontestimonial reports include documents pertaining to the routine inspection, maintenance, and calibration of a breathalyzer machine.

(7) DNA Evidence. See Guide to New York Evidence rule 7.21 (DNA Evidence).

(8) “Opening the door evidence.”

Unconfronted testimonial hearsay is not admissible in response to evidence introduced by a defendant in a criminal case that is misleading even though the misleading evidence would be subject to correction by the unconfronted testimonial hearsay.

Note

Subdivision (1). The Confrontation Clause of the US Constitution Sixth Amendment requires that “[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right . . . to be confronted with the witnesses against him.” That Clause applies to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment of the US Constitution (Pointer v Texas, 380 US 400, 406 [1965]), and therefore limits the admissibility of “testimonial” hearsay statements that may otherwise be admissible under state law.

The parameters of “confrontation” are defined in subdivision (1) in accord with Crawford v Washington (541 US 36, 42 [2004]) and Giles v California (554 US 353, 367 [2008]).

In Crawford, the Supreme Court held that

“[w]here nontestimonial hearsay is at issue, it is wholly consistent with the Framers’ design to afford the States flexibility in their development of hearsay law Where testimonial evidence is at issue, however, the Sixth Amendment demands what the common law required: unavailability and a prior opportunity for cross-examination” (Crawford v Washington, 541 US at 68).

Crawford, however, does not extend to a testimonial statement admitted “for purposes other than establishing the truth of the matter asserted” (Crawford v Washington, 541 US at 59 n 9; Williams v Illinois, 567 US 50, 57-58 [2012] [plurality op], and at 125-126 [dissenting op]; People v Garcia, 25 NY3d 77, 86 [2015]; People v Reynoso, 2 NY3d 820, 821 [2004]).

Nor does Crawford apply to the admission of testimonial statements at a sentencing proceeding (People v Leon, 10 NY3d 122, 125-126 [2008]), or in a grand jury proceeding where there is no right of confrontation.

Last, a defendant may forfeit the right of confrontation where the defendant engaged or acquiesced in wrongdoing that was intended to and did procure the witness's unavailability (Giles; see Guide to NY Evid rule 8.19, Forfeiture by Wrongdoing; Fed Rules Evid rule 804 [b] [6]; see also People v Geraci, 85 NY2d 359, 366 [1995] ["out-of-court statements, including Grand Jury testimony, may be admitted as direct evidence where the witness is unavailable to testify at trial and the proof establishes that the witness's unavailability was procured by misconduct on the part of the defendant"]).

Subdivision (2) (a) is derived from Crawford's declaration that "[w]hatever else the term [testimonial evidence] covers, it applies at a minimum to prior testimony at a preliminary hearing, before a grand jury, or at a former trial" (Crawford, 541 US at 68).

Subdivision (2) (b) (i) is derived from Crawford (541 US at 68), which itself directly held inadmissible a witness's statement obtained by formal station house interrogation (541 US at 68); and Michigan v Bryant (562 US 344, 358 [2011]), which declared that "the most important instances in which the [Confrontation] Clause restricts the introduction of out-of-court statements are those in which state actors are involved in a formal, out-of-court interrogation of a witness to obtain evidence for trial." (See People v Goldstein, 6 NY3d 119, 129 [2005] ["(T)he statements made to (the expert) by her interviewees were testimonial. . . . (The interviewees) knew they were responding to questions from an agent of the State engaged in trial preparation. None of them was making 'a casual remark to an acquaintance'; all of them should reasonably have expected their statements 'to be used prosecutorially' or to 'be available for use at a later trial.' . . . Responses to questions asked in interviews that were part of the prosecution's trial preparation are 'formal' in much the same sense as 'depositions' and other materials that the Supreme Court identified as testimonial"].)

Subdivision (2) (b) (ii). The rule that, absent a formal investigation, a statement is testimonial when the "primary purpose" of questioning was to prove criminal conduct or past events relevant to a criminal prosecution is derived from Davis v Washington (547 US 813, 822 [2006] [statements "are testimonial when the circumstances objectively indicate that there is no . . . ongoing emergency, and that the primary purpose of the interrogation is to establish or prove past events potentially relevant to later criminal prosecution"]; see Michigan v Bryant, 562 US 344, 358, 366, 370 [2011] ["although formality suggests the absence of an emergency and therefore an increased likelihood that the purpose of the interrogation is to establish or prove past events potentially relevant to later criminal prosecution, informality does not necessarily indicate the presence of an emergency or the lack of testimonial intent” (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)).

That a statement is testimonial when its primary purpose is to create a substitute for trial testimony is derived from Bryant (562 US at 358 [“When . . . the primary purpose of an interrogation is to respond to an ‘ongoing emergency,’ its purpose is not to create a record for trial and thus is not within the scope of the Clause. But there may be other circumstances, aside from ongoing emergencies, when a statement is not procured with a primary purpose of creating an out-of-court substitute”]; accord Ohio v Clark, 576 US 237, 238 [2015]; People v John, 27 NY3d 294, 307 [2016] [a “statement will be treated as testimonial only if it was procured with a primary purpose of creating an out-of-court substitute for trial testimony (People v Pealer, 20 NY3d 447, 453 [2013], quoting Michigan v Bryant . . .)” (internal quotation marks omitted)]).

In People v Pacer (6 NY3d 504, 510 [2006]), the Court held that a Department of Motor Vehicles affidavit, which was introduced in evidence to prove that the defendant knew or had reason to know his driving privileges had been revoked, was testimonial because it was used to prove an “essential element” of the crime charged. However, in People v Franklin (— NY3d —, —, 2024 NY Slip Op 02227, *3 [2024]), the Court rejected Pacer’s “essential element” analysis, noting that Pacer’s analysis has been “eclipsed by subsequent developments in Confrontation Clause jurisprudence.” Rather, as Franklin explained, “in ascertaining whether out-of-court statements are testimonial, courts should inquire, as the U.S. Supreme Court has instructed, ‘whether in light of all the circumstances, viewed objectively, the “primary purpose” of the conversation was to “create[e] an out-of-court substitute for trial testimony” ’ (Clark, 576 US at 245, quoting Michigan v Bryant, 562 US 344, 358 [2011])” (— NY3d at —, 2024 NY Slip Op 02227, *3). Applying that test to the Criminal Justice Agency report in issue in Franklin, the Court of Appeals held that the “report was not to create an out-of-court substitute for trial testimony, and that it is not therefore testimonial. The primary purpose of a CJA interview and resulting report is administrative, not something tailored ‘to establish or prove past events potentially relevant to later criminal prosecution’ (Clark, 576 US at 244 [internal quotation marks omitted]). Its objective is to give the arraignment judge information pertaining to a defendant’s suitability for pretrial release . . . not to elicit incriminating statements” (— NY3d at —, 2024 NY Slip Op 02227, *4-5).

Subdivision (3) is derived from Davis v Washington (547 US at 822) which decided two cases. In the first case, a 911 caller’s statements relating to an ongoing assault, including the identification of her assailant, were not testimonial, given that the “primary purpose” of the statements was to obtain help (People v Nieves-Andino, 9 NY3d 12, 17 [2007]; People v Bradley, 8 NY3d 124, 127 [2006]). In the second case, the police, responding to a “domestic disturbance” call, found no ongoing emergency, and thus statements in response to their questions as to what happened were testimonial. (See Michigan v Bryant, 562 US at 349 [where the police found a mortally wounded person lying on the ground in a parking lot of a gas station, the victim’s statement identifying his assailant, in response to police questions, was admissible because the “ ‘primary purpose of the interrogation’ was ‘to enable police assistance to meet an ongoing emergency’ ”[.])

Subdivision (4) is derived from People v Hardy (4 NY3d 192 [2005]) and People v Douglas (4 NY3d 777 [2005]).

Subdivision (5) (a) is derived from Ohio v Clark (576 US at 249-250 [“(M)andatory reporting (obligations) . . . cannot convert a conversation between a concerned teacher and her student into a law enforcement mission aimed primarily at gathering evidence for a prosecution. It is irrelevant that the teachers’ questions and their duty to report the matter had the natural tendency to result in Clark’s prosecution”])).

Subdivision (5) (b) is derived from People v Duhs (16 NY3d 405, 408-409 [2011] [a child’s responses to a medical doctor questioning the child for purposes of treatment were not testimonial]).

Subdivision (6) (a) is derived from Melendez-Diaz v Massachusetts (557 US 305 [2009] [drug analysis]); Bullcoming v New Mexico (564 US 647 [2011] [blood-alcohol content]); People v Rawlins (10 NY3d 136, 157 [2008] [fingerprint report]); People v John (27 NY3d at 307-308 [DNA report that linked the defendant to possession of the weapon he was charged with possessing]); and People v Austin (30 NY3d 98, 104 [2017] [buccal swab was obtained and the resulting profile was compared with the DNA profile generated from the burglaries “with the primary (truly, the sole) purpose of proving a particular fact in a criminal proceeding—that defendant . . . committed the crime for which he was charged”])).

Subdivision (6) (b) is derived from Bullcoming (564 US at 651 [holding that a surrogate analyst who was familiar with the laboratory’s testing procedures, but “had neither participated in nor observed the test,” did not satisfy the Confrontation Clause requirement]); and People v Hao Lin (28 NY3d 701, 705 [2017]) from which the language of subdivision (6) (b) is taken. In Hao Lin, a retired officer performed the “breath test” and the officer who testified observed him “perform all of the steps on the checklist and saw the breathalyzer machine print out the results. Based upon his personal observations, Mercado—as a trained and certified operator who was present for the entire testing protocol—was a suitable witness to testify about the testing procedure and results in defendant’s test. Inasmuch as Mercado testified as to his own observations, not as a surrogate for Harriman, there was no Confrontation Clause violation.” (Id. at 707; see People v John, 27 NY3d at 314 [“(T)he claim of a need for a horde of analysts is overstated and a single analyst, particularly the one who performed, witnessed or supervised the generation of the critical numerical DNA profile, would satisfy the dictates of Crawford and Bullcoming”]); People v Jordan, 40 NY3d 396, 402 [2023] [“the testifying analyst must have either participated in or directly supervised this ‘final’ step that generates the DNA profile, or (conducted) an ‘independent analysis’ of the data used to do so in a manner that enables replication of the determinations made at that stage in order to verify the profile”].)

Subdivision (6) (c) summarizes the holdings of People v Ortega (40 NY3d 463 [2023]) to the effect that an autopsy report is testimonial evidence.

Subdivision (6) (d) is derived from People v Pealer (20 NY3d at 455-456 [with respect to a breathalyzer machine, the Court noted that “Melendez-Diaz recognized the possibility that records ‘prepared in the regular course of equipment maintenance’—precursors to an actual breathalyzer test of a suspect—‘may well qualify as nontestimonial records’ (557 US at 311 n 1)”]; cf. People v Jordan, 40 NY3d at 400-401 [holding that the dictates of Crawford did not apply to the “preliminary” steps prior to the analysis of the raw electrophoresis data which involved “ ‘essentially ministerial tasks’ ” in which the analyst “simply prepare(s) the DNA samples for testing”])).

Subdivision (7) notes that the rules pertaining to what constitutes testimonial DNA evidence are contained in Guide to New York Evidence rule 7.21 (DNA Evidence).

Subdivision (8) is derived from Hemphill v New York (595 US 140 [2022]). Contrary to the principle set forth in People v Reid (19 NY3d 382 [2012]) that was applied in People v Hemphill (173 AD3d 471 [1st Dept 2019], affd 35 NY3d 1035 [2020]), the Supreme Court held that the “opening the door to evidence” principle must not permit the introduction of evidence in violation of the Sixth Amendment’s Confrontation Clause. In Hemphill, the defense to a murder indictment rested upon a claimed third party’s culpability; in accord with New York’s then “opening the door to evidence” principle, the trial court allowed the introduction of the third party’s guilty plea when the third party was unavailable to testify. The parties did not dispute that the third party’s guilty plea was “testimonial” hearsay, and the Supreme Court then held its admission to be in violation of the Confrontation Clause. Thus, even if it may be argued that “unconfronted, testimonial hearsay” would respond to a party’s misleading impression on an issue, it is not admissible: “[The Confrontation Clause] admits no exception for cases in which the trial judge believes unconfronted testimonial hearsay might be reasonably necessary to correct a misleading impression. Courts may not overlook its command, no matter how noble the motive” (595 US at 154).

The Supreme Court, however, made a point of stating that “the Court does not decide today the validity of the common-law rule of completeness as applied to testimonial hearsay. Under that rule, a party against whom a part of an utterance has been put in, may in his turn complement it by putting in the remainder. The parties agree that the rule of completeness does not apply to the facts of this case, as Morris’ plea allocution was not part of any statement that Hemphill introduced. Whether and under what circumstances that rule might allow the admission of testimonial hearsay against a criminal defendant presents different issues that are not before this Court” (595 US at 155-156 [internal quotation marks and citations omitted]; see Guide to NY Evid rule 4.03).

¹ In June 2022, this rule was amended to add subdivision (7) with a corresponding Note to incorporate the rule of Hemphill v New York (595 US 140 [2022]).

In December 2023, the subdivision (6) rule as it related to an autopsy report was revised to accord with the Court of Appeals decision cited in the Note under subdivision (6) (c).

In April 2024, subdivision (6) (d) (ii) relating to DNA evidence was deleted and subdivision (7) was added to include a cross-reference to the Guide to New York Evidence DNA rule. The Note to subdivision (6) (d) was also updated primarily to account for the holding and import of People v Jordan (40 NY3d 396, 401 [2023]).

In May 2024, the Note was updated to include the Court of Appeals decision rejecting the rationale of People v Pacer (6 NY3d 504 [2006]) in People v Franklin (— NY3d —, —, 2024 NY Slip Op 02227, *3 [2024]).
