

Finding Law Reviews - Google Scholar Example

A quick way to locate information on a topic is certainly to “Google” the topic. However, if we’re looking for a professionally reviewed article on a subject with a large degree of reliable and trustworthy, referenced information, it’s best to look for articles in authentically published law reviews and in sources such as Lexis. That said, it still may be feasible to “Google” the topic, “Google Scholar” it that is! You’ll be sorting through a mix of articles from among several disciplines, but using advanced features and help tips, you can sort through them more easily.

1. From an Internet browser, go to the URL: <http://scholar.google.com/>
2. Select Articles. Click to uncheck Patents.

3. For a general search, enter search terms into the search box. For Google Scholar search tips, see: <http://www.google.com/intl/en/scholar/help.html>

For advanced search, click the down arrow to go to the advanced search form.

4. Our sample topic is cyberbullying related to children in schools. In this example, enter cyberbullying where it appears in the title of the article.

The image shows a screenshot of the Google Scholar website's advanced search interface. The browser address bar shows <http://scholar.google.com/>. The page includes navigation links for "My library", "My Citations", "Alerts", "Metrics", and "Settings". The "Find articles" form is displayed with the following fields and options:

- with all of the words:
- with the exact phrase:
- with at least one of the words:
- without the words:
- where my words occur:
 - anywhere in the article
 - in the title of the article
- Return articles authored by: e.g., "PJ Hayes" or McCarthy
- Return articles published in: e.g., J Biol Chem or Nature
- Return articles dated between: — e.g., 1996

5. The number of results returned is 1900 and counting. Results can be limited and sorted by date. However, it may be beneficial to narrow the results list by viewing the second title. Cyberbullying, it's nature and impact in secondary school pupils and to select “related articles” since this article’s focus is on schools and children.

The screenshot shows a Google Scholar search results page. The search query is 'allintitle: cyberbullying', which has returned approximately 1,900 results. The page is displayed in a browser window with the address bar showing the URL: http://scholar.google.com/scholar?as_q=cyberbullying&as_epq=&as_oq=&as_eq=&as_occ. The search results are listed in a table-like format with columns for article titles, authors, and PDF links. The first result is 'An investigation into cyberbullying, its forms, awareness and impact, and the relationship between age and gender in cyberbullying' by PK Smith, J Mahdavi, and M Carvalho, published in 2006. The second result is 'Cyberbullying: Its nature and impact in secondary school pupils' by PK Smith, J Mahdavi, and M Carvalho, published in 2008. The third result is 'Cyberbullying in schools a research of gender differences' by Q Li, published in 2006. The fourth result is 'Bullies move beyond the schoolyard a preliminary look at cyberbullying' by JW Patchin and S Hinduja, published in 2006. The fifth result is 'Cyberbullying: Another main type of bullying?' by R Slonje and PK Smith, published in 2008. The sixth result is 'Bullvina cvberbullvina and suicide'.

Keywords: Bullying; victim; cyber; mobile phone; internet; adolescence; aggression; computers

Background: Cyberbullying describes bullying using mobile phones and the internet. Most previous studies have focused on the prevalence of text message and email bullying.

Methods: Two surveys with pupils aged 11-16 years: (1) 92 pupils from 14 schools, supplemented by focus groups; (2) 533 pupils from 5 schools, to assess the generalisability of findings from the first study, and investigate relationships of cyberbullying to general internet use. Both studies differentiated cyberbullying inside and outside of school, and 7 media of cyberbullying.
