In this Child Victims Act (“CVA”) action, the plaintiff, proceeding under the pseudonym “PC-23 Doe,” seeks to recover damages from the Parish and defendant THE ROMAN CATHOLIC DIOCESE OF BROOKLYN (“The Diocese”) for personal injuries that he purportedly sustained as a result of alleged sexual abuse. Specifically, the plaintiff alleges that between approximately 1982 and 1984, when he was between the ages of ten and thirteen years old, he was sexually abused by Fr. Raymond P. Roden (“Fr. Roden”), who at the time was a priest employed by the Parish.

The plaintiff commenced this action on July 13, 2020, by filing and serving a Summons and Complaint in which he asserted causes of action for negligent hiring, retention, supervision, and direction, negligent, reckless, and willful misconduct, negligent infliction of emotional distress (“NIED”), premises liability, breach of fiduciary non-delegable duty, breach of duty in loco parentis, and breach of statutory duties to report against the Diocese and the Parish arising out of his alleged sexual abuse by Fr. Roden.

The Diocese and Parish joined issue on October 13, 2020, by filing and serving Verified Answers.

Much of the discovery in this case, including many of the depositions, was conducted in conjunction with the related CVA cases of two brothers: PC-38 Doe v. The Diocese, et al., Index Number 513684/2020 (Sup. Ct. Kings Cnty.) and PC-40 Doe v. The Diocese, et al., Index Number 513720/2020 (Sup. Ct. Kings Cnty.). The plaintiffs in all three cases claim that Fr. Roden abused them, they knew each other at the time of the alleged abuse, and are represented by the same attorneys, Phillips and Paolicelli.

By stipulation dated February 12, 2024, the plaintiff agreed to voluntarily discontinue without prejudice his causes of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress, premises liability, breach of fiduciary non-delegable duty, breach of duty in loco parentis, and breach of statutory duties to report.

On August 27, 2025, the plaintiff filed his Note of Issue and Certificate of Readiness.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The plaintiff alleges that between approximately 1981 or 1982 and 1984, when he was a minor child between the ages of ten and thirteen years old, Fr. Roden sexually abused him multiple times at various locations, including on the premises of the Parish, in Fr. Roden's office in the rectory, and during an outing to the World Trade Center.

Additionally, plaintiff in a related action, Erasmo Ortega ("Ortega"), alleges that Fr. Roden abused him between 1973 and 1976 at Transfiguration Church ("Transfiguration") and during a retreat in Tarrytown. He claimed that in approximately 1975 to 1976 he told Fr. Bryan Karvelis ("Fr. Karvelis"), the pastor of Transfiguration and a priest within the Diocese, that Fr. Roden was abusing him. Other than Fr. Karvelis, Mr. Ortega did not report the alleged abuse to anyone else.

The plaintiff first met Fr. Roden by the rectory of the Parish around 1981, when he was approximately 10 years old. He knew Fr. Roden as "Father Ray" and did not know his last name. He and PC-38 Doe were in the Parish schoolyard and approached Fr. Roden, who was standing outside, and shook his hand and allegedly kissed his ring.

Shortly after they met, Fr. Roden asked the plaintiff and PC-38 Doe, who were trying to make money, to come into the rectory to help him clean. Fr. Roden also would give him and PC-38 Doe a sandwich, a soda, or money and ask them to go to the store for him. In 1981, he generally saw Fr. Roden two to three times each week, usually after school when he would go to the playground. Sometimes other children were present when he and PC-38 Doe went to see Fr. Roden in the rectory, but he could not remember who they were. He claimed that there were always people at the front of the rectory, but that he never had to check in with anyone when he entered.

The plaintiff claimed that Fr. Roden would touch him a lot, hug him, and kiss him on the cheek. He testified that he would sit in a chair in Fr. Roden's office and that Fr. Roden would pull the chair toward him and hug and touch him. Whenever he and PC-38 Doe went into Fr. Roden's office, Fr. Roden would lock the door.

The plaintiff claimed that Fr. Roden touched his penis approximately four to six times. The first time this occurred, he and PC-38 Doe were in Fr. Roden's office and Fr. Roden unzipped their pants and abused them both. Before that incident, Fr. Roden had also touched the plaintiff over his pants. Fr. Roden also touched him and PC-38 Doe with his penis.

At some point in 1982 after the alleged abuse first began, Fr. Roden told the plaintiff and PC-38 Doe that he was planning on taking them on a trip, either to the movies or to the World Trade Center, and they chose to go to the World Trade Center. He did not tell his parents, sisters, or grandfather that Fr. Roden was taking him on a trip.

Fr. Roden, the plaintiff, and PC-38 Doe took a cab to the World Trade Center and then went inside. After visiting the World Trade Center, they went to a McDonald's restaurant across the street and Fr. Roden bought them some food. While they were at McDonald's, Fr. Roden followed them into the bathroom and asked them to masturbate him. Afterward, they took a taxi back to their neighborhood and Fr. Roden dropped them off a few blocks away before he returned to the rectory.

The plaintiff never contacted anyone from the Parish or the Diocese to report that Fr. Roden allegedly abused him. Likewise, PC-40 Doe never contacted anyone from the Parish or the Diocese to report that Fr. Roden allegedly abused him. Similarly, PC-38 Doe never told anyone that Fr.

Roden allegedly abused him until 2012, when he and non-party Angel Huertas spoke at a barbecue about how Fr. Roden had abused them.

LEGAL STANDARD

In considering a motion for summary judgment, the Court's primary focus is whether a genuine issue of material fact exists. Ayotte v. Gervasio, 81 N.Y.2d 1062, 1063 (1993). Summary judgment is warranted when there are no material factual disputes to be resolved by the trier of fact. Mallad Const. Corp. v. County Fed. S&L Ass'n, 32 N.Y.2d 285 (1973). This may occur when all issues are strictly legal, Long Island Railroad Co. v. Northville Indus. Corp., 41 N.Y.2d 455, 562 (1977), or when uncontroverted facts allow only one conclusion as a matter of law. Alvord & Swift v. Stewart M. Muller Constr. Co., Inc., 46 N.Y.2d 276 (1978). The Court's primary objective in its review of a motion for summary judgment is, "issue finding, not issue determination." Goldstein v. County of Monroe, 77 A.D.2d 232, 236 (4th Dep't 1980); see also Sillman v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., 3 N.Y.2d 395 (1957). Furthermore, in reviewing a motion for summary judgment, it is not the court's duty to assess credibility, but rather to determine if bona fide issues of fact exist. Gaither v. Saga Corp., 203 A.D.2d 239 (2d Dep't 1994); Black v. Chittenden, 69 N.Y.2d 665 (1986).

The movant bears the burden of establishing a right to summary judgment, as a matter of law. Ferrante v. American Lung Ass'n, 90 N.Y.2d 623, 625 (1997). The movant bears the "initial burden of coming forward with admissible evidence." GTF Marketing, Inc. v. Colonial Aluminum Sales, Inc., 66 N.Y.2d 965, 967 (1985). "The proponent of a summary judgment motion must make a prima facie showing of entitlement to judgment as a matter of law, tendering sufficient evidence to eliminate any material issues of fact from the case." Winegrad v. N.Y. Univ. Med. Ctr., 64 N.Y.2d 851, 852 (1985); see also Zuckerman v. New York, 49 N.Y.2d 557 (1980).

After a movant establishes a prima facie showing, the burden shifts to the non-movant, and the non-movant is required to produce proof “sufficient to require a trial of material questions of fact on which he rests his claim or must demonstrate acceptable excuse for his failure to meet the requirement of tender in admissible form; mere conclusions, expressions of hope or unsubstantiated allegations or assertions are insufficient.” Zuckerman, 49 N.Y.2d at 562. The non-movant cannot “rely on mere speculation or conjecture as to the true nature of the facts to overcome a motion for summary judgment.” Harley ex rel. Johnson v. City of N.Y., 36 F. Supp. 2d 136, 138 (EDNY 1999) (quoting Knight v. U.S. Fire Ins. Co., 804 F.2d 9, 12 (2d Cir. 1987)). Summary judgment must be granted “if, upon all the papers and proof submitted, the cause of action or defense shall be established sufficiently to warrant the court as a matter of law in directing judgment in favor of any party.” CPLR 3212(b).

In deciding a summary judgment motion, a court must view the evidence in a light most favorable to the opposing party and give such non-moving party the benefit of every favorable inference. Sheryll v. L & J Hairstylists of Plainview, Ltd., 272 A.D.2d 603, 604 (2d Dept. 2000). Moreover, on a motion for summary judgment premised on failure to state a cause of action, the relevant criterion is not whether the proponent of the pleading has stated a cause of action, but whether that party has one. Seidler v. Knopf, 186 A.D.3d 889, 890 (2d Dept. 2020).

It is the movant who has the burden to establish an entitlement to summary judgment as a matter of law. Ferrante v. American Lung Assn., 90 N.Y.2d 623 (1997). CPLR §3212(b) requires the proponent of a motion for summary judgment to demonstrate the absence of genuine issues of material facts. Alvarez v. Prospect Hosp., 68 N.Y.2d 320, 324 (1986); Stone v. Continental Ins. Co., 234 A.D.2d 282, 284 (2d Dept. 1996). Where the movant fails to meet its initial burden, the motion for summary judgment should be denied regardless of the sufficiency of the opposing papers. Alvarez, 68 N.Y.2d at 324; Winegrad v. New York University Medical Center, 64 N.Y.2d 851, 853 (1985); US Bank N.A. v. Weinman, 123 A.D.3d 1108 (2d Dept. 2014).

Furthermore, as a general rule, a defendant's burden cannot be satisfied merely by pointing to gaps in the plaintiff's proof but must affirmatively demonstrate the merit of its claim or defense. Reed v. Watts Water Technologies, Inc., A.D.3d WL 219927 (2d Dept. 2023); Vittorio v. U-Haul Co., 52 A D 3d 823 (2d Dept. 2008). Only when a movant has shown a prima facie right to summary judgment does the burden ordinarily shift to the opposing party to show that a factual dispute exists requiring a trial. Zuckerman v. New York, 49 N.Y.2d 557 (1980); Friends of Animals, Inc. v. Associated Fur Mfrs., Inc., 46 N.Y.2d 1065 (1979).

A necessary element of a cause of action for negligent hiring, retention or supervision of an employee is that the employer knew or should have known of the employee's propensity for the conduct which caused the injury. Fuller v. Family Services of Westchester, Inc., 209 A.D.3d 983 (2d Dept. 2022). The employer's negligence lies in having placed the employee in a position to cause foreseeable harm, harm which would most probably have been spared the injured party had the employer taken reasonable care in making decisions regarding the hiring and retention of the employee. Roe v. Domestic and Foreign. Missionary. Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church, 198 A.D.3d 698, 701 (2d Dept. 2021).

Specifically, "the duty to investigate a prospective employee, or to 'institute specific procedures for hiring employees,' is triggered only when the employer 'knows of facts that would lead a reasonably prudent person to investigate the prospective employee'." Sandra M v. St. Luke's Roosevelt Hosp. Center, 33 A.D.3d 875, 879 (2d Dept. 2006).

Where, as here, a complaint also alleges negligent supervision of a child stemming from injuries related to an individual's intentional acts, "the plaintiff generally must demonstrate that the [defendant] knew or should have known of the individual's propensity to engage in such conduct, such that the individual's acts could be anticipated or were foreseeable." Nevaeh. T v. City of New York, 132 A.D.3d at 842, quoting Timothy Mc. v. Beacon City Sch. Dist, 127 A.D.3d 826, 828 (2d Dept. 2015); see also Mirand v City of New York, 84 N.Y.2d 44 (1994). "[S]chools and camps owe a duty to supervise their charges and will only be held liable for foreseeable injuries proximately caused by the absence of adequate supervision." Osmanzai v. Sports and Arts in Schools. Foundation, Inc., 116 A.D.3d 937 (2d Dept. 2014).

Additionally, notice may be imputed to a corporate entity even when no report is made of the alleged misconduct. When agents act within the scope of their authority, everything they know or do is imputed to their principals. Indeed, the principal is bound by knowledge acquired by an agent acting within the scope of his or her agency even if the information is never actually communicated to it. People v Gross, 169 A.D.3d 159 (2019).

With respect to the notice requirement as applied under the CVA, the Second Department held in Kwitko v. Camp Shane, Inc., 224 A.D.3d 895, (2d Dept. 2024), that even when no formal report is made or documented, defendants can still be charged with notice of abuse. In that case, the court tempered the defendant's summary judgment burden to fit the legislative purpose of the CVA. The circumstances of each CVA case are unique, however many of them are based on events that occurred decades ago, as is the case here.

In Kwitko, the Second Department reversed the decision of Westchester County Supreme Court, which held that because there was no documentation that the alleged abuse was reported to staff at the defendant summer camp, and because plaintiff testified that no such report was made, that defendant met their prima facie burden regarding the notice requirement.

The rationale in Kwitko was applied by Nassau County Supreme Court in M.E. v. Camp Summit of Summitville, Inc., 2024 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2092. In that case, the Court permitted renewal and re-argument of defendants' motion for summary judgment, which was previously granted, and denied the underlying motion on the basis that defendants had not met their prima facie burden with respect to notice. In that case, as in Kwitko, "Defendants have no records to prove that they had no notice, actual or constructive, of a propensity of [camp counselor] to commit sexual abuse. [Camp counselor] is not even remembered by defendants. Defendants cannot simply rely on plaintiff's testimony that he told no one of his abuse. Nor can they rely on the fact that defendant Judith Stern, who ran the camp with her husband, personally was unaware of any allegations of sexual abuse of campers." See Id at 3.

DISCUSSION

The first issue is whether the Parish had actual or constructive notice of Fr. Roden's abuse of plaintiff. Here, non-party Ortega testified that he was abused by Fr. Roden in the 1970s, when he was a minor child, and that he reported that abuse to Diocesan Priest and pastor, Fr. Karvelis, in 1975 or 1976. As such, there is evidence in the record that Fr. Karvelis had actual notice of Fr. Roden's propensity to abuse children prior to the events at issue. Plaintiff in this case testified that he did not report the abuse to anyone at the Parish.

Defendant first addresses this issue by claiming the Parish could not have had actual notice of Fr. Roden's propensity for abuse despite Ortega's report because nothing in the record indicates that any Parish employee or agent had knowledge of that report. Additionally, defendants argue, Transfiguration is a separate corporate entity from the Parish. Therefore, any notice that could be imputed to Transfiguration or the Diocese cannot be imputed to the Parish. Defendant's Memo. Of Law at pg. 10. Defendant having made a prima facie showing of entitlement to summary judgment on the issue of actual notice, plaintiff's opposition does not specifically argue that any employee or agent of the Parish had knowledge of Fr. Roden's history of abuse at Transfiguration, or of the abuse at issue in this case. As such, the court finds that the Parish did not have actual notice of Fr. Roden's abuse of children.

The next issue is whether the Parish had constructive notice of Fr. Roden's abuse. In support, Defendant argues that any evidence of constructive notice in the record is based on "pure speculation and conjecture." Defendant's Memo. of Law at pg. 15. Defendant points to S.C. v. New York City Dep't. of Education, 97 A.D.3d 518 (2d Dep't 2012), in which the Second Department granted summary judgment where the teacher who allegedly abused students was known for "regularly eating lunch [together] in the chorus room," and "sometimes paying for [plaintiff's] lunch"; and the teacher's consoling plaintiff for up to six hours at his home after the student ran away from home, before informing the plaintiff's mother. S.C. v. New York City Dep't. of Education, 97 A.D.3d at 518-19.

Additionally, defendant cites Lisa P. v. Attica Central School District, 27 A.D.3d 1080 (4th Dep't 2006), in which two 12-year-old boys were allegedly sexually molested by Burnside, a schoolteacher employed by the defendant school while on the school bus during a school-sponsored trip to Boston, Massachusetts. The Fourth Department in that case reversed the trial court's decision denying summary judgment. The court in that case found that, "defendant's actual or constructive notice that [the teacher] slept in a room with boys under his supervision does not establish the requisite knowledge or notice of [the teacher's] propensity or likelihood to engage in sexually abusive behavior." Lisa P. v. Attica Central School District, 27 A.D.3d at 1081. Here, defendant argues that as in S.C. and Lisa P., Fr. Roden's practice of speaking to young boys in his office with the door locked, inviting boys to sleep in the rectory with him, buying them food, etc.

is not sufficient to charge the Parish with notice of his propensity for abuse. Defendant has made a prima facie showing of entitlement to summary judgment on the issue of constructive notice.

In opposition, plaintiff argues that Fr. Roden's conduct and reputation during his time as a priest at the Parish was sufficient to put the Parish on notice of his propensity for abuse. Plaintiff points to Fr. Roden's deposition testimony, in which he states that it was Parish policy not to have children sleep over in the rectory outside of "special circumstances." Aff. in Opp. at pg. 17. Despite this, Roden regularly had children sleep over in the rectory with him on at least a dozen occasions, without authorization. Id. Plaintiff also points to portions of the testimony of PC-23, PC-38, and PC-40, in which they describe being touched by Fr. Roden in the presence of other adults, including workers at the Parish. Id. PC-23, PC-38, and PC-40 also testified that there were other adults and Parish employees present in the rectory when they were being abused by Fr. Roden. Id.

Additionally, plaintiff argues that the Parish had constructive notice because both Transfiguration and the Parish were overseen by the Bishop, who had a duty to visit both parishes. Defendant's witnesses, Ritty and Garcia, both testified that parishes within the Diocese are set up as corporations where the Bishop is president, the pastor serves as secretary, and the Vicar General, the second-in-command to the Bishop, also serves on the board and that was true from 1975-1985 as well. Aff in Opp at pg. 23. Ritty also testified that the Bishop had authority to investigate and remove priests who were accused of misconduct. Id at 14. Therefore, plaintiff argues, any notice imputed to Transfiguration and the Diocese through Ortega's report, would be imputed to the Bishop as an officer of the parishes in the Diocese. Memo of Law in Opp. at pg. 20. Because the Bishop had a duty to visit both parishes and oversee their operations, plaintiff argues, a jury could find that he knew or should have known about the abuse at both parishes.

Based on the deposition testimony in the record, a reasonable jury could conclude that the Parish knew or should have known of Fr. Roden's propensity for abuse. His pattern of isolating children in his residence in violation of Parish policy, in addition to his habit of being physical with children in front of other adults, creates questions of fact as to notice. The cases cited by Defendant are distinct from the case at bar. In Lisa P., the teacher in question slept in a room with students one time at a school-sanctioned field trip. Here, Fr. Roden regularly had children sleep over at the rectory, which was his residence, without authorization, in violation of policy. This behavior, coupled with his frequent public displays of physical attention toward children, in the presence of Parish workers, was sufficient to charge the Parish with constructive notice of Fr. Roden's propensity for abuse. Additionally, the fact that both parishes shared a common supervisor and corporate officer, the Bishop, who had the authority to investigate and remove priests who were accused of misconduct. The Bishop held this position while the alleged abuse took place at both Transfiguration and the Parish. This creates a question of fact as to whether the Parish had notice of the abuse at both the Parish and Transfiguration.

CONCLUSION

Based on the testimony and evidence submitted, the Court finds that plaintiff's opposition raises questions of fact to be submitted to the jury. Fr. Roden had a pattern of inappropriate contact with children while he was a priest at the Parish, which violated Parish policies. Additionally, Ortega reported Fr. Roden for misconduct while Fr. Roden was the priest at Transfiguration, creating notice which can be imputed to the Bisop as president of both the Parish and Transfiguration. On these facts, a reasonably jury could conclude that the Parish had constructive notice of Fr. Roden's propensity for abuse both before and during his time as parish priest. As such, Defendant's motion for summary judgment is denied. Regarding Defendant's request that, in the alternative, the Court dismiss plaintiff's claims for punitive damages and for joint and several liability under Article 16, the Court finds that these claims are also to be decided by the jury.

Therefore, it is hereby,

ORDERED that defendant Parish's motion for summary judgment is denied in its entirety.

This constitutes the decision and order of the Court.
